

The Trenton Times

Trenton, New Jersey

July 21, 1893

A Babe Fatally Mangled

Large Pieces of Flesh Torn From Its Body by a Ferocious Bull-dog.

A ferocious bull-dog, owned by Charles Freehouse, of Egg Harbor, attacked his two-year old baby without provocation and bit it so badly that it will die. The brute chewed the child's legs and arms to that they are so mangled and torn that the bone of one of the legs was exposed. The dog fairly ate the flesh of the child and was driven off just as it grasped the little to by the throat. The dog was instantly shot. An examination of the body of the child showed that large pieces of flesh had been torn from the abdomen.